The future of Europe’s single financial market is still unclear: The European Commission is set to propose the building blocks of the Capital Markets Union by 2019, just as the full effects of Brexit are expected to hit. Will Europe take this opportunity to reinforce its commitment to deeper market integration? With President Emmanuel Macron in charge in France, will Paris and Berlin form a dynamic duo to give Europe the common financial framework needed to boost growth and investment? Will the eurozone be able to reform and integrate further, allowing capital to flow freely within the monetary union and Europe at large? In its push to build a robust and competitive financial industry, what must Europe do to attract new businesses and maintain its appeal in this new world order?

KEY TOPICS:
- Eurozone reform
- Capital Markets Union
- Access to Capital for SMEs
- Financial Regulation and Competitiveness

The world café roundtable comprises groups of 15-20 people seated around three tables to dive into a specific topic, under chatham house rule. Each roundtable will be led by a POLITICO or l’AGEFI journalist and a key speaker. Every 30 minutes, the moderators and speakers will rotate, joining a new table of summit participants. At the end of the roundtable sessions, moderators and speakers will summarize the outcomes of the discussions on the main stage. The cafe-style setting will also be ideal for generating insightful conversations on how to tackle the biggest problems.

2:40 PM
